Daily Microcosm Plans Press Conference

The Daily Microcosm, the only newspaper with distribution rights in the USSR, is planning its first press conference with politburo chief Jeffivich Hol-lachev.

In response to detractors who claim it won't be a real press conference, Microcosm editor Lax Waller said, "We are the press, and we plan to confer with our leaders, so it's a real press conference."

Waller assured his readers that they would be well represented. "Our ten best reporters will be there," he asserted.

Waller admitted, however, that his reporters would be very careful not to ask any probing or substantial questions of Hol-lachev, "We don't want to rock the boat. That's not our job," he explained.

In an attempt to prepare his staff for the big press conference, Waller is personally supervising their reading of Asking Questions, an official politburo publication.

A "Hairy" Change for Ex-Coach

Many were shocked last week when Coach Ladell Anderson resigned his post at BYU. Although Anderson claimed he was going into retirement, Student Enquirer has learned that he has bought a hair salon in Provo Town Square.

When questioned, Anderson said that even though he hasn't had much experience with hair, he has always wanted to go into the business.

Anderson's new salon, "Filling the Lane," will specialize in hair implants and toupés.

Contras Coming to Provo

(AP Wire Service)

At a news conference yesterday in Miami, Nicaraguan Contra leader Miguel Maria Sanchez announced that his freedom fighters would soon begin leaving Central America and heading for Provo, a small town in Utah.

Speaking to mystified reporters, Sanchez said that since the recent peace talks have "squeezed us out of the picture" in Nicaragua, Contra leaders have been looking for a suitable place to continue their fight for democracy.

"We realize that while we may have failed here, there are suppressed people everywhere who need our help. We considered Iran, Kampuchea, and Bulgaria, but the recent sham elections held at Brigham Young University in Provo convinced us that's where we're needed most."

Sanchez said his guerrillas would aim to "topple the Mark Crockett puppet regime" and declare free elections. "We're determined to raise the standard of democracy and free elections everywhere," exclaimed Sanchez.

Lt. Col. Oliver North, when asked about rumors that he had tipped off the Contras to the situation in Provo, replied, "I do my patriotic duty whenever I see the opportunity."

JSB "REMOVAL" DUE TO "ICKY FEELINGS"

by Max Deadrock

The imminent razing of the Joseph Smith Memorial Building, home of the Religion department and bastion of campus spiritual strength, was recently announced by the BYU maintenance and fortification committee. It has been discovered by the Standards Parapsychology division of Student Life, that the JSB harbors an evil spirit too strong for even "Man of the Year" John Stohlton to exorcise.

The JSB has long been the "Safe Haven of Dogmatism" for BYU, so the allegations and succeeding investigation came as quite a shock. The first suspicions were voiced by an undergraduate student in a Doctrine and Covenants summer class who asked how the "damned confusing" JSB qualified as a "house of order." Students in the class later testified that a sudden chill came over the room, and the teacher muttered something about, "answering the question later," which he never did.

This first find initiated a landslide of heinous discoveries that ended only with a call for the destruction of the building.

A study made of the personal life of architect Pen T. Graham revealed the following statement made in 1937, during his senior year at Laramie Wyoming Central High: "I've got it in for my seminary teacher for flunking me—before my life is over, I will sow disruption and disorder that will shake the very south ends of Brigham's campus." This statement, verified by his mother-in-law, confirmed fears that Mr. Graham was a pagan from Wyoming, and therefore not qualified to design any buildings for the Church Educational System.

The study also uncovered other splotches on the JSB's celestial white facade:

art by Jeff Lee

1) The Religion faculty has failed to "permeate the world with our consciousness." Topics such as evolution, finding truth in non-Mormon sources, and the progression of God continue to be discussed in other areas of campus.

2) Night janitors have reported strange apparitions, including the sliming of apprentice custodian Eugene Burplehedge by an eight foot "stay-puff televangelist."

3) Students claim to have been overcome by a "stupor of thought" while listening to political diatribes in Book of Mormon classes.

4) Empty Coke and Jolt Cola bottles have been found in various, undisclosed locations in the building.

These, and other sinister events, clearly outlined and explained in the Standards investigation, brought to the attention of the administration the possibility that there was an evil spirit inhabiting the JSB. These suspicions were later confirmed by an unbiased panel of freshman coeds who felt really icky nine times out of ten when entering the JSB.

The faculty has failed.

GENEVA PLEDGES SUPPORT OF MISS BYU PAGEANT

Last week, in a low-key news conference, Geneva Steel President Joe Cannon pledged his support of BYU and BYUSA by donating $50,000 to underwrite the costs of the Miss BYU pageant for the next ten years. Mr. Cannon recalled the fun of homecoming activities during his days at BYU and the "gorgeous chicks" that won the Miss BYU award. "We just want to help," said Mr. Cannon, "We feel that this is a tradition that should be perpetuated, and we feel that this move will help to integrate us into the student community."

The cheerful events of the afternoon were marred, however, by an outburst from a shabbily dressed man who loudly asked if Geneva wasn't just trying to buy out community support. Mr.

Cannon calmly replied that his accusations were akin to pestering the Soviet Union about human rights violations while signing major treaties, and the issue was dropped.

A smiling Buffy Warbucks accepted the check on behalf of BYUSA, and thanked Mr. Cannon for his contribution. She then explained the history of the Cannon Center. I'm sure that your money will be put to good use."

The student response to the donation has been overwhelmingly positive. "I'm just so excited!" said Leslie LaDawn Swensen, a graduate student in the School of Home and Business Management.

The only remaining unanswered question is where the money will go now that the pageant has been discontinued.

$50,000 Budget for a BYUSA Party

Yesterday, BYUSA announced the students named to the planning commission for its 1st annual, "Cut Above the Rest Summer Bash." This party, sponsored by BYUSA for incoming and outgoing BYUSA officers will be the, "all-time cool event of the year," according to head party planner Biff Forbes. With a budget of some $50,000, the festival will include events such as the, "Favorite Perfume bath" featuring selections of Gorgio, Joy, and Shalimar. Also sure to be a hit with the officers will be the, "Leather Clad French Mud-Pack Wres-ting," and the "Dan Quayle/Pat Nixon Young Republican Look-Alike Contest."

The party, planned to run some three days in the Salt Palace, will have entertainment provided from the likes of Ungee Bungee, New Disorder, and Donny Osmond. "The catering has tentatively been arranged with Marriott International" was the first official announcement from the committee—thus putting to rest fears of "brown bagging it" that have plagued the project from the start.

Also in attendance will be past and present BYU success stories to give the BYUSA officers advice on how to run a successful organization and become rich before the age of thirty. For those unable to attend, the party will be featured on the April 1st edition of, "Lifestyles of the Loose and Gluttonous" with Robin Leachman.

Masochist Harp Seals Deserve It

by Chuck Schenkowsky

Seal hunters of the world unite! Recently, some hoopla has been created in the liberal bleeding heart press about the supposed suffering of the Arctic harp seal population. To counter this misinformation I am revealing some vital information that the public must be aware of. Here is my definitive "Ten Reasons Not to Save the Harp Seals":

1. Harp seals are masochistic by nature. Recent studies at the Arctic Institute found that the animals relish pain. Lab animals were found to return repeatedly for electric shock treatment. Some have been known to scale walls in order to throw themselves onto spikes. These findings lead to the theory that harp seals actually enjoy being clubbed.

2. The Canadian government claims that 30% of the yellow snow in the Arctic can be attributed to baby harp seals. This and other pollution problems have caused the Canadians to actively campaign for the animals' extermination.

3. My grandmother, Anastasia Schenkowsky, doesn't like harp seals.

4. Large seal populations are an ever-present danger to oil tankers and other shipping. Seals have been known to capsize boats and then viciously attack the survivors.

5. Most seal hunters are compulsive wife beaters. If hunting were abolished, these tragic statistics would begin to skyrocket.

6. If you've seen one harp seal, you've seen them all.

7. The seals are threatening dwindling flounder populations, according to the director of the "Save a Flounder, Club a Seal" campaign.

8. Seals undermine the morals of our society. Not only are seals known to "live in sin," but many males have entire harems.

9. Often ignored is the excitement and sport of hunting seals. Stalking the crafty animals and attempting to outwit them epitomizes the age-old challenge of man vs. beast.

10. My grandfather, Vladimir Schenkowsky, doesn't like harp seals.

If you have been touched by this article and would like to help, please send all donations to the Retired Seal Clubbers Rest Home, 44 West Center, Provo, Utah, 84601. Send checks c/o Joe Cannon, President of Geneva Steel and Honorary Chairman of the Retired Seal Hunter Association. He's just trying to help.

This Week in Business

Insurance Czar Appointed

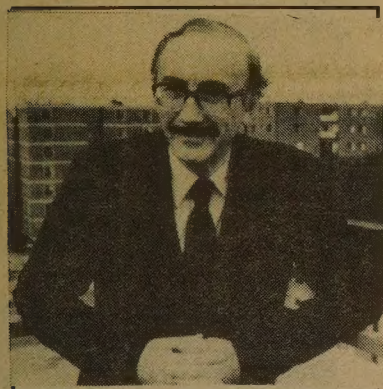

Dr. Solomon R. Goldberg was recently appointed director of BYU's mandatory insurance program. Goldberg brings a substantial background in business and finance to the job, though details of his career were not available.

Incidentally, the Student Enquirer recently discovered that Goldberg, a native of Cody, Wyoming, was once tarred and feathered by the citizens of Cody and was asked by the town council never to return. "It was merely a personality conflict, a miscommunication," Goldberg insists.

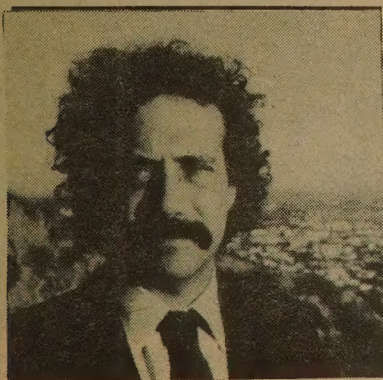

Hair man accused of Nazi past

Klaus Barbierson, Swedish inventor and proprietor of Barbierson's Miracle Hair Formula, recently defended himself against charges that he is the infamous Barber of Seville, a former Nazi war criminal known for scalp transplant research in concentration camps. But a spokesman for the B'nai Brith Anti-Defamation League was unconvinced. "How do you think he knows so much about hair?" he asked.

Lost Documents Discovered

LaMont K. Rigdon, antiquarian, religious historian, and arms dealer last week announced the discovery of several Mormon historical documents including, he claims, "the lost 127 pages." Rigdon found the documents in an old cabin outside of Cody, Wyoming. Rigdon, incidentally, was recently investigated in connection with the bombing of Cody's city hall. No charges were filed, but when asked by the Student Enquirer, Cody Police Chief Willy Buckman said, "I aint sure. This guy makes me jittery all over—something about him makes m' scalp crawl."

New Cut Rate Student Insurance

Student Review announced yesterday that Sam Warbucks will head up its new insurance plan for struggling students in Utah which would satisfy the demands of BYU's new mandatory insurance requirements. Students for only $2.00 would be given an insurance policy protecting them from, "indigestion and callouses." "For $2.00," Warbucks stated, "students will be protected from a variety of ailments. Our policy guarantees them several aspirin and a decorative get-well card sent in the mail. We are quick and efficient."

Life Found Under BYU

Two startled BYU students touring the tunnels beneath campus managed to snap this picture of an unidentified tunnel resident before turning to flee last Saturday night. BYU officials were skeptical. "This is ridiculous," said Executive Vice President John Stohlton, "After all, this is the Lord's University."

WAVE GOOD-BYE TO TACO SALADS

By Darren Vance
Senior Executive Chief Reporter

Incoming BYUSAFRSF (BYU Students Association for Resume Space-Filler) president Jeff Singer has called for the abolishment of any and all taco salads due to the inherent problem of "padding" during production. One monstrous salad, made for a worker's friend, weighed a whopping 52 pounds and cost the school $37. Another problem was the public displays of affection associated with the common practice of ordering one taco salad with two forks.

Inside sources quoted Singer as saying, "It's time for action and that's what we're about. The salads must go." Opposition leaders representing the Peoples Liberation Front for the Glorious Independence of Mexican Salads stated, "It is obvious why he is doing this. He needs to show some good faith after promising during the election to do absolutely nothing whatsoever. Now he wants to take it out on innocent food." Despite these accusations, The Weekly Universe stands by the decision 110%. For too long, things like taco salads have gone unregulated.

"The main problem," says Lamar LaJohnson, Director of Cougar Eatz Foodz, "is that several times we've caught my girls putting a little extra cheese and meat on for their friends." This lack of control com-

"It is obvious why he is doing this. He needs to show some good faith after promising during the election to do absolutely nothing whatsoever. And now he wants to take it out on innocent food."

bined with PDA leaves the administration no alternative but to ban them altogether. Emmalou Bumpus, leader of the opposition and a taco salad engineer herself, responded to those accusations by handcuffing herself to the Lord's jukebox which was playing nothing but "La Bamba." She said, "I won't leave until the salads are reinstated!" Miss Bumpus also warned that anyone using the term "my girls" again will be severely beaten about the face and neck.

Later that day, at a sort of official press conference, V.P. of Love and Academics, John Scoldem, announced that punishment for possession of a taco salad will be harsh: "at least six hours of watching 'Morality for Youth'." He also stated that this would include "my girls who used to make the salads." Scoldem was promptly beaten about the face and neck with over one-dozen corn tortillas. Other reactions included President Holland, who said, "Gosh, I like taco salads." Muffy Splitendez, VP of Dietary, was visibly upset and said, "I'm upset."

Despite the intense resistance (including the opposition's latest communique which threatened that "The sidewalks of BYU will run red with Picanie sauce"), we at the Lord's newspaper intend to remain loyal supporters of BYUSAFRSF and the reigning administration. So join us and just say no to taco salads.

NEW DOCTRINE ROCKS LDS CULTURE

By Mike Mower
Super Special Reporter

In a surprise announcement today the LDS Church said that the size of the family will be limited to a total of three people. Mark Jones, Church spokesman said, "We were just getting tired of many great High Council talks being ruined by crying children, not to mention the expense of sending three or four sons on missions. How can a school teacher from Sandy afford it?"

The reasons for this move are not only monetary; the word from On High is that there are just not many more spirit children waiting to come down to this world. Helen and Floyd LaBean from Burley commented, "We're sure glad we've had our twelve kids. It would be hard to farm potatoes with one child."

This will be the size of Mormon families of the future.

The John B. Stohlton "We're doing this for your own damn good" Award Given

By Darold Goldfarb
Ace Scoop Reporter

Provo Mayor Joseph B. Jenkins is this year's recipient of the John B. Stohlton "Free Agency's Agent" award for doing for BYU students what they should do for themselves. Under the wise guidance of Mayor Jenkins, the Provo City Council recently passed an ordinance prohibiting outdoor dances after 10 p.m. Violators of this law will be fined $500.

Said Mayor Jenkins, "This ordinance isn't aimed against BYU students, although they are the only group to hold outdoor dances." He added, "I had a brother who was hit by a drunk driver—after 10 p.m. The longer our youth dance, the more excited their passions become. That leads to sex. That's bad." The award is named after John B. Stohlton, a fan of enforced free agency and forced medical insurance.

A plethora of polyester adorns the Provo Mr. Mac Store.

UNDERWORLD ORGANIZATION BRAIN-WASHES VALLEY

By Kurt Glade
Senior Editor in Charge of Scandals

After months of undercover investigation, it has been discovered that members of a secret underworld investigation have been infiltrating the populous of Utah Valley.

Evidently fed up with the crass materialism in this last decade, the organization, which calls itself "The Apparel Connoisseurs against Khaki and Yuppies (T.A.C.K.Y.), are gaining supporters fast. Best known for their distinct mode of dress characterized by brown Swedish knit suits, black suede loafers (with tassels), white-on-white striped polyester blend dress shirts, and conservative striped ties (oft times accompanied by a silver tie bar, mini-sewing kit, or compact travel iron), T.A.C.K.Y. disciples have been sighted walking Provo streets on Sunday mornings and throughout the week in campus religion classes.

The mastermind responsible for this vicious coup is the sinister fashion guru himself, Mr. Mac Christensen. Flanked by an oligarchy of monotone sales people emanating the charisma of slug bait, the Mac dynasty grows daily.

T.A.C.K.Y. seems primarily concerned with the recruitment of young males nearing the end of their teen-age years. They are lured into the organization's mall establishment under false premises and walk out some $500 poorer clad totally in un-natural fibers. They evidently get their subjects hooked on the wash-and-wear lifestyle to the point where they can't dry-clean or iron with any proficiency, so they keep coming back.

The purpose of Mac's mind-controlling antics are not totally clear. It has been hypothesized that the feeling one gets in Mac attire will, over time, dull one's sense of taste and style to the point that they will become flamboyantly tacky. This numbness then leads to subjection to Mac's every whim, fancy, and $69.99 polyester sportcoat sale. Eventually, the Mac-robot surrenders completely to this lord of the two-pant suit, and Mac gains control of their thoughts and actions. Today a religion professor, tomorrow the entire Utah Valley.

Unfortunately, no one is safe from the evil cult's mind controlling antics. Mr. Mac announced this week the expansion of his existing empire and plans to open two new specialty outlets to be known as Sister Mac and Little Mac, catering to the fashion needs of women and children respectively.

 - Personal Management Merit Badge Counselor

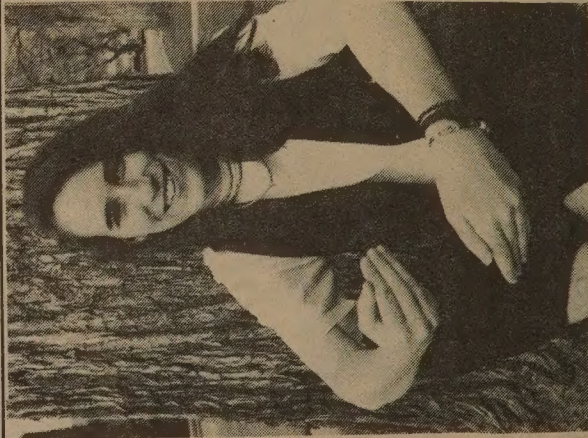

I will bring to BYUREX a deep concern for human and animal rights and will fight for the rights of all creatures in our university community. Of course this includes Rex. After all, my family hasn't eaten pork for centuries.

Rex is a beautiful symbol of the tolerance we should have for each other's differences. He is a fat, hairy, unclean beast, but we love him.

My objectives are clear and simple: to remove every vestige of pinko swine from this campus (excluding Rex, of course). Those who advocate tolerance for anything but the absolutely pure, white, and delightful some are dupes of Satan. No one will be exempt from our purges. We must achieve unity!

JOHN STOHLTON NAMED MAN OF THE YEAR

John's our Man of the Year, first and foremost, because he's a no-nonsense, law-and-order kind of guy. Not the sort to waste any time worrying about entropy. Here you see him single-handedly quelling a student revolt.

Well, the anticipation and excitement are over for another year. We, the conscientious and journalistically scrupulous staffers at Student Enquirer, have made our decision.

John Stohlton, Executive Vice President of Brigham Young University has been chosen as 1989's Man of the Year.

We at Student Enquirer, take this annual responsibility extremely seriously, and realize that millions of people around the world pay very careful attention to the person we choose each year.

We tried to find other candidates for this honor, but just could not find anyone else in Mr. Stohlton's league.

Personal testimonials were given on behalf of Mr. Stohlton by those of us who have had the privilege of actual contact with this man. Unanimously they ranted, unanimously they raved. "Mere words escape us," they insisted.

So we bowed to the inevitable. Let the chips fall where they may. John Stohlton is our man.

Our man, our idol, our role model, our staunchest supporter, a fearless advocate of the freedom of the press, the list goes on and on.

Well, John, congratulations!!!

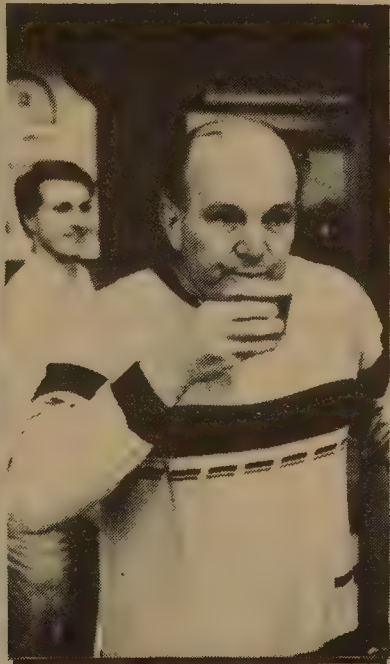

Always valiant, John doesn't know the meaning of defeat or spineless compromise. In fact, some people think he's tenacious to an extreme, but not us.

Just because he won't take any guff doesn't mean he doesn't have another side. People who know him best say that inside that gruff exterior, he's just a big softie. Way to go, John. Way to be a Man of Steel and Velvet.

Always with at least one ear open to his subordinates, John commands the respect of those privileged to work with him.

Not above having a good time, despite his conviction of the extreme importance of his work, John can be a real fun guy.

We forget what this photograph represents, but are certain it can only be another reason for our choice of Man of the Year.

Heritage Lake Geneva Resort

by Tom Bragg

Utah Valley's newest fun-filled vacation spot has just opened for business! Heritage Lake Geneva Resort and Cruise Line, located on the scenic shores of Utah Lake, offers the fun seeker a wide variety of leisure, sport, and travel activities.

A multitude of fabulous vacation packages are available, with prices ranging from down-right cheap to "we just can't afford that." (Please see our agent at Ask Mr. Finster's Mother's Best Friend's Third Cousin's Dog Groomer's Girl Friend's Travel Service for information about group discounts.)

And there's something to appeal to everyone! For example, you could bask on the beaches near our lakeside steel mill. Even after the sun goes down, the air is kept comfortably warm, and scented with our secret mixture of oxides, sulfides, and particulate matter, all for your health and relaxation. Or take a stroll along the beach in the moonlight with that "special someone" you've been wanting to impress, and let the gentle lapping of the milky green waves work its magic.

For the sports enthusiast, we have deep-lake channel cat fishing. Once you hook into one of those babies, you're in for the fight of your life! Or, you might try angling for the elusive white bass. Occasionally we even hear reports of record-size carp being taken right off the beaches! Boats are available for charter, at half- and full-day rates.

If casting a line isn't what you had in mind, you might try sailing with us on the Homecoming Princess, our fabulous new cruise ship. Made right here in Utah Valley with steel produced at our local facilities, she's the envy of all the ships that ply the channels north of Spanish Fork. We've spared no expense to bring you the utmost in first class luxury and entertainment! Concerts, shows, firesides, film entertainment, whatever you would ever care to do on a cruise liner can be found. We even offer a video/pizza package for your first date!

Any game your heart desires can be found in our Gaming Room. We keep track of the distance the ship travels, and once we've circled the lake a few times (long enough to be in Wendover if we were going in a straight line) we set up the tables. Hearts, Crazy-8s, Pinochle, and even Go Fish! You'll be certain to have a wonderful time, even if you're a beginner. Gaming lessons are available.

While on board, be sure to sample the magnificent buffet (all you can eat for one low price!) and shop in our sales tax-reduced store, where you can find everything from computer ribbons to fresh homemade fudge. Reservations are required well in advance, so make your plans!

For those with truly adventure-some tastes, why not try the Heritage Mountain Splash!!? A modern engineering and financing wonder, the Heritage Mountain Splash!! is the biggest ski/slide/swim ride in the world. A special shuttle takes you to the top of our Heritage Mountain ski resort, where all the fun begins. The thrills escalate as you race down the mountain towards the mouth of the "Tunnel," and enter a subterranean riverworld of wonder! After sliding for a few miles you can surface in downtown Provo for a quick trip to the park or to do your grocery shopping. Then it's off to the second half of the experience, an aerial tram ride that unceremoniously dumps you into the lake within swimming distance of the airport! (Note: This ride is not recommended for those with heart conditions, and IDs will be checked at the gate.)

We welcome you to Heritage Lake Geneva Resort, and hope to see you soon. Remember, time's fun when you're having flies!

When Tom isn't reading, writing, cooking, sewing, playing golf, goofing off, "pumping rubber," being a jerk, spending quality time with his wife and kids, flying kites, or grading chemistry quizzes, he can be found doing strange things to bacterial DNA in the Widtsoe Building.

YOKO ONO

UNRECOGNIZED GENIUS

by Kristina Stewart

Oh the cynicism, oh the wit, oh the profound understanding of man's nature. Yoko Ono's long awaited artistic renaissance opened in New York's Whitney Museum in February, and well, I just couldn't keep away. I flew to New York at the first opportunity. Man was I moved.

This exhibit ties the old, pre-Lennon, Yoko with the newly emancipated Yoko by amassing a formidable collection of self-indulgent, uh, I mean self-penetrating pieces.

You may not have known this, but Yoko had a life before John. In fact, she was an artist! Yes, her art clique (the Fluxes) was on the cutting edge of biting cynical commentary using the medium of performance art. Yoko, et al., were the Da-Daists of the 60s, forging new paths of thinking and questioning art as it was currently defined.

The Whitney's curator Barbara Haskell describes, well, my favorite piece, Four Spoons. "A profound spirit pervaded the pieces with the result that humor became a major component of Ono's work. Four Spoons (1967) confounded verbal common sense by presenting three spoons."

Likewise Yoko's other pieces present what seems to be narcissistic mundane household objects, but in actuality, the pieces grip the viewer, forcing him/her to redefine existing values and beliefs.

I just can't see why Student Review, and especially this Jeffrey Lee character, insists on mocking this very special lady. She doesn't deserve a permanent place on the Bottom 11; rather, she should command a permanent place in each of our hearts!

Yoko, we too mourn the loss of your husband John, and commend you for wearing black all of these years in mourning for him, but one thing helps us through the pain and frustration: we still have YOU!

Kristina and Jeff have contests to see who the biggest Yoko Ono fan is. So far it's hard to tell who's winning.

MOORE SISTERS

SWITCHED AT BIRTH!!!

Student Enquirer staffers experienced a heightened sensation of foolishness to learn the big news along with the rest of the world. Who ever would have suspected that the Moore sisters were switched at birth?

We thought we knew these girls as well as anyone, but we were chagrined to learn we were deceived, too.

Connie, Laurie, and Michelle, we were sure we knew who you were, but now we find out that Michelle might really be Connie, and Laurie, Michelle. Who does that make Connie?

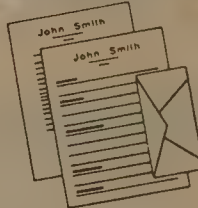

We're confused, girls.

Why Live on Campus at BYU?

Mrs. P., Vincent's mother, was at her wits' end.

My son was ready for an "on his own" experience, but I was worried if there was a college that was ready for him. At BYU, I know that Vincent's special needs will be taken care of. I especially like those extras that the dorms offer—like chained padlocks, cattle prods and lithium. I've had three other completely sociopathic kids live on-campus. What more can I say?

Miffy & Dave

by JoEmma Cannon

Miffy pulled the hot rollers from her hair and picked it carefully until it poufed like popcorn balls. Then she neatly applied two shades of powder-blue eyeshadow and electric navy mascara. Finally, she puckered her lips and put on a perfect shade of pearlescent pink lipstick. She blinked three times and twirled in front of the mirror.

"Gosh, Miffy," her roommate told her, "The guys at the dance won't be able to take their eyes off you."

"Thanks, LaDonna," she said. "I sure hope it's fun."

Walking down to the ELWC from their Heritage Halls apartment, Miffy wished on a star.

"Star light, star bright,
First star I see tonight—
I wish I may, I wish I might,
Find an RM to love tonight."

Dave pulled on his navy blazer and slipped into his nice, sturdy loafers. It had been three long years, two of them in the mission field, since he'd been to a BYU dance. Knotting his yellow paisley tie, he tried to remember the polka steps he'd learned long ago in social dance.

Waltzing out of his apartment, he glanced up into the dark sky. One bright star caught his eye, and he smiled, foolishly, alone in the dark.

"Starlight, star bright,
First star I see tonight—

I wish I may, I wish I might
Find a girl to marry tonight."

As Dave held his hand out for the phosphorescent smiley-face stamp that would let him exit and re-enter the dance, he saw a beautiful young woman standing alone near the refreshment table. Light seemed to radiate from her sweet face, and he felt unaccountably drawn to her.

As he walked toward her, she turned and looked into his eyes. Her eyes were blue, blue as a "true blue BYU" bumpersticker and Dave's heart jumped.

Miffy had been standing near the refreshment table for a few minutes. "Food," she recalled a religion teacher saying, "The way to a righteous man's heart is food." So, logically, Miffy stood by the Y-sparkle and cherry chews, waiting and silently hoping that he would come.

Then she saw him, walking slowly toward her. He smiled a clean, forthright smile, and she felt warm and fuzzy all over.

"Mind if I have some Y-sparkle?" Dave grinned sheepishly.

"Were you on a mission in ... Star Valley, Wyoming?" Miffy blurted out, before she could think of anything else to say.

"No, I was in Peru," Dave answered.

"Oh," Miffy sighed regretfully.

"But I wish I'd been in Star Valley ... if you were there." Dave smiled

a heart-warming & wholesome story shyly.

"I wish I'd been in Peru!" Miffy giggled in soprano.

"Let's dance," Dave suggested, and in a moment they were in each other's arms, fox trotting around the ballroom as if no one else was there.

At the end of the dance, Dave and Miffy were still fox trotting happily. Finally as the lights came up, they stood still.

Dave cleared his throat. "Miffy?" His tone was suddenly serious.

"Yes, Dave?"

"Will you come to the fireside with me on Sunday?"

"Oh, Dave, I'd love to."

Pulling out their Franklin planners together, they exchanged phone numbers, addresses and last names.

As they stepped outside to go home their separate ways, Dave and Miffy looked up at the clear night sky.

"You know I ..." they started simultaneously, and laughed.

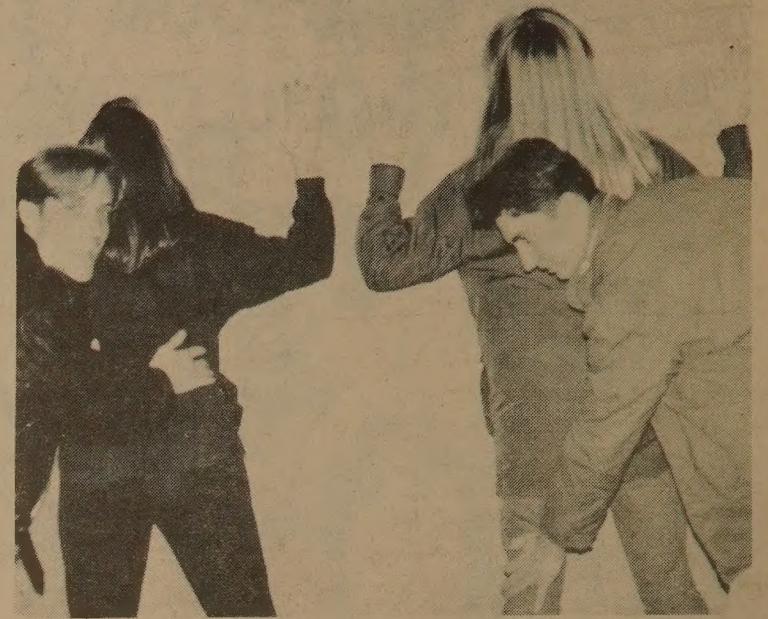

"You first," said Dave courteously.

"Well ... I just was going to say," Miffy said softly, "That I wished on a star tonight."

"No, really?" said Dave. "Me too! It's—it's a coincidence!"

Miffy looked into his eyes. "Or maybe more than a coincidence," she said dreamily. The temple glowed on the hill behind them, and the stars winked down from the sky.

NARCS CAN FRISK YOU!

Some consider them quislings or narcs, while others believe they help us become better people. We all know they exist—paid student informants who turn in the names of those they see violating BYU rules.

This photograph proves the recent empowering of student narcs to arrest and frisk suspects. Beware. Remember, you can't trust anyone.

Special Poetical Feelings

SLUMBER PARTY POETRY
by J.L. & G.B.

So finally we're coming together,
Mental barriers yield broken plastic,
Smiling clouds are drastic
Splattered against an unfriendly sun.

Water drains shadows over us;
Stockings soaked with puddles of understanding.

Fools weep, but shoes are full.
Pneumonia of love—at least we're friends.

I stay in my bed, coughing.
Inviting you into my sheets of ill health.

We shared everything:
charms, disease, germs, and your bedding.

You ravish me like a fiesty shark.
The shark opens his mouth and there is a lozenge;

A mere symbol of pride wrapped in cherry-flavored slick.

You swallow and I sweat.

The nurse would go away; white-shoed, sanitary bondage,

Yet her hands heal me and save me from the venom that falls on me from your warm, hypocritical tongue.

SLUMBER PARTY POETRY II
by G.B., J.L., S.T.

Checkerboard patterns scathed my mind
Playing sensory hopscotch

One, two, three, skip
Tiny, tiny, skip two, three, hop.
Buried in crevices of depression,
I should have been a pair of ragged claws
Scuttling across the floors of silent seas.

TO MY SPECIAL SOMEONE
by Scott B. Thomas

I really hope that you will forgive my persistence,
But I know we must have met in the pre-existence.
I don't know why you're putting up such resistance
You ought to know by now that I won't keep my distance
I promised you I'd find you once again.

I marvel every day at your special sweetness
Our life together surely would be one of completeness.
Every day I pray I'll find some opening or weakness
So you will let me in your life with gentleness and meekness.
I promise you I'll try you once again.

My feelings for you are nothing less than eternal
I think about you every day while writing in my journal
It doesn't matter whether you're in

Timbuktu or Vernal,
I only wish my attentions you would not spurn all.
I promise you I'll cry for you again.

I know I'll keep on loving you as long as I am able
My heart is spread out for you on the kitchen table
Sometimes I think your distance is some kind of fable
Please don't make me sleep out in the stable
I promise you my love for you again.

OUR LOVE IS A TIRE
by B. T. Scott

Our love is like a tire that's gone flat
All your words are just so much hot air
I'd like to make an ostrich egg go splat
All over your long, blonde, poofy hair.

You used to be a steel-belted radial
Sleek and firm, you really made me go.
Now you whump like you're out of balance
And you handle like bald bias ply in snow.

Too bad I can't arrange to trade you
I didn't get a mileage guarantee
So even if you look like you've been driven through the mud
I guess you're the only tire for me.

WORLD IN REVIEW

Harold B. Lee Library

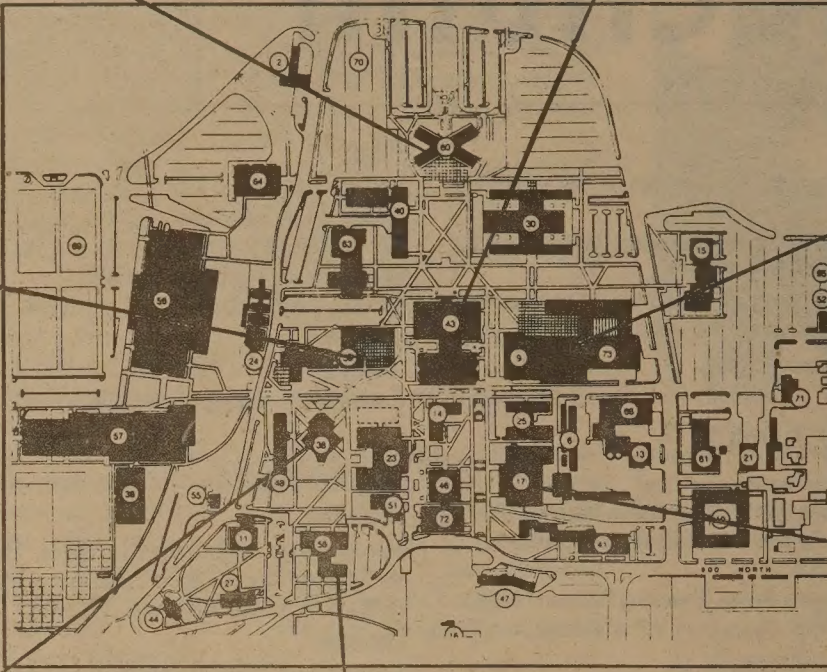

To increase enforcement of the dress code on BYU campus, flesh detectors have been installed at the exits of the Lee Library. Sockless males and miniskirt clad females will be detected by the new system and detained at the exit until socks or a knee length skirt can be procured; the cost of which will be added to the violator's tuition. John Stohlton, Executive Vice-President, discovered a need for a device to help students with their commitment to live the honor code. Geneva Steel's Joe Cannon bid for the contract to develop the flesh detector saying, "Heck, we're just trying to help."

Smith Family Living Center

Professor Holman of the Family Science Department was charged Monday with 236 accounts of fraud and bribe acceptance. The charges were uncovered in an extensive investigation by undercover BYU agents. Holman is accused of fixing the results of his Marriage Compatibility Test (MCT) for future couples and accepting bribes from desperately hopeless balding RMs. Joe Cannon, President of Geneva Steel sympathized with the RMs and their hair loss, but would not accept responsibility for their dilemma saying, "Heck, we're just trying to help."

Spencer W. Kimball Tower

In an attempt to heighten awareness of the excellent student assistance available on the first floor of the SWKT, a new program has been implemented. Students in the Psychology and Family Science fields will sign up for three hours of volunteer work each week. They will be instructed to speak with passers-by asking: Are you flunking Physical Science?; Do you feel the library is too full of Kappas to allow you to study?; Do you hate your roommate?; Are you a junior without a major?; and other questions that will cause the students to realize that they need to take advantage of the counseling center in the SWKT. Because this is the first week the program has been in operation, results are not yet available, but some volunteers have received death threats.

Joseph Smith Building

Recent revelations indicate the presence of "evil spirits" permeating the entire structure of the JSB. "This clearly explains the confusion in our midst," said Brother Dogma, acting dean of the Religion Department. As a result of this discovery, major renovation is planned that will include razing the JSB and replacing it with a new edifice constructed by the Provo High School Vocational Education classes. Funding for the renovation project will come from Geneva Steel. When asked to comment, Joe Cannon said, "Heck, we're just trying to help." (See story page 4)

Ernest L. Wilkinson Center

The Animal Science department sponsored Agriculture Week in an effort to educate the large number of Southern Californian students on this campus who have led sheltered lifestyles before coming to BYU. A cow milking demonstration was held in the garden court. Joe Cannon provided funding for the importation of healthy cows from Idaho saying, "Heck, we're just trying to help." Mary Balstaff from Newport, California, who attended the demonstration said, "I've never seen anything like this cow animal at Sea World, Disneyland, or Newport Beach."

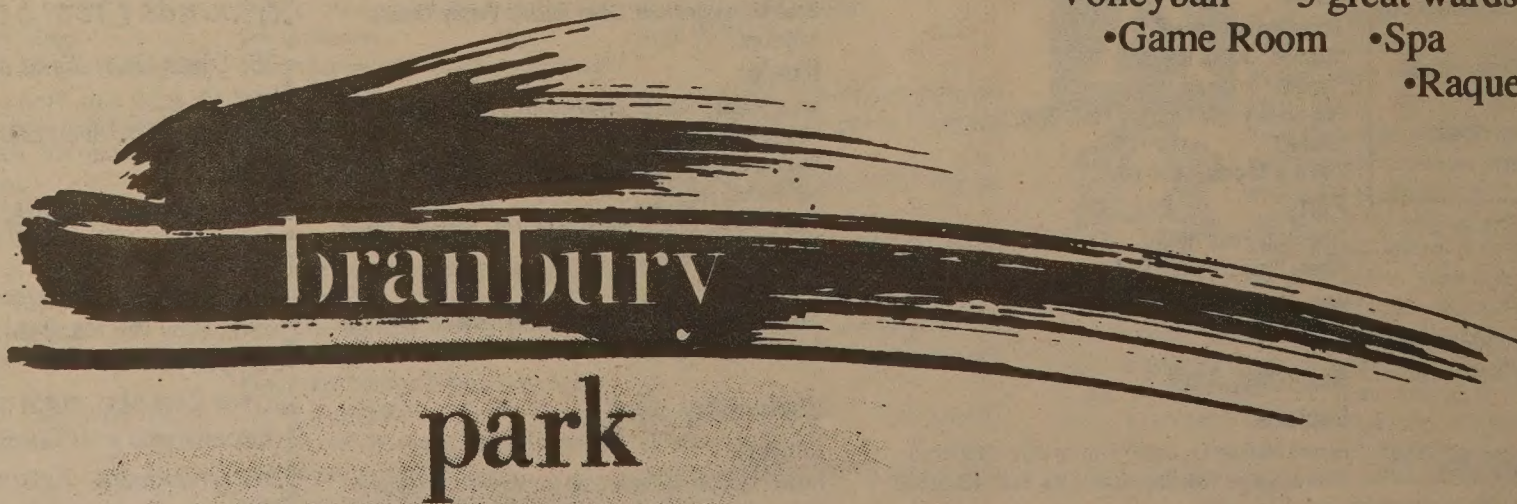

Clyde Building

The furniture in the step down lounge of the Clyde Engineering Building was found in shambles after a young female English major daringly walked through the lounge. An onlooker reported that "chairs flew everywhere, calculators were crushed, and tables were overturned as the engineering majors raced to be first to open the door for her." A married engineering student, the only one available for comment, tried to explain the conduct of his fellow students saying, "It isn't very often that these students interact with the female sex due to their educational commitment to interface with computers. Nevertheless, they're good guys, and they'll take every opportunity to follow the counsel of Church leaders and date as long as it doesn't interfere with their studies."
